March 30, 2020

Dear Conference Attendees, Parents, and Teachers,

First of all, we are excited to announce a Virtual EYH taking place on our original conference date of April 18th, 2020. We are currently planning a full day of engaging talks, panels, workshops, and demos that will be broadcast live via Zoom throughout the day and we hope many of you will log on to join us remotely. More details and a full schedule will be announced closer to the conference date, but in the meantime, we hope you will help us spread the word! While we are saddened not to host you all on campus this year, we are finding a unique silver lining in the opportunity to engage with premier scientists from all across the state and country. Participation in this year’s Virtual EYH will be completely open to all participants, regardless of age, location, gender, etc., so please share this information with friends, neighbors, family members, or anyone else you think might be interested! The live webinar will be accessible all day without any prior registration, so we hope many of you will join us for some or all of the programs.

We’d also like to again thank you all for your patience and understanding with the unexpected changes to EYH this year, testaments to the strength and support that runs so deeply through the EYH family. As many have pointed out, we may be physically distant at this time, but as a community we feel closer than ever before.

Keep an eye on our website (http://eyh.cornell.edu) and social media accounts (facebook.com/CornellEYH, Twitter and Instagram: @CornellEYH) for more information and glimpses of our all-star STEM lineup!

We hope to see all of you on April 18th for “EYH at home”! If you have any questions, comments, suggestions, or concerns, please reach us at eyh@cornell.edu.

Stay well,

Sincerely,

Berit Goodge
EYH Conference Chair
eyh@cornell.edu